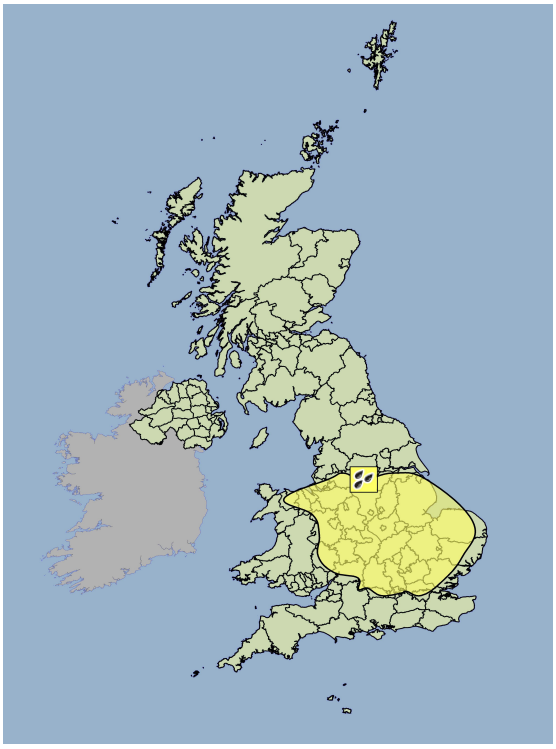
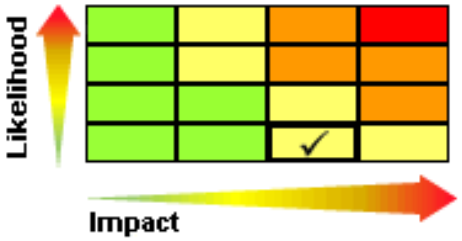
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Increasingly hot and humid conditions are likely across many central and southeastern parts of England during today, with the high temperatures likely to trigger a few intense thunderstorms during the late afternoon and evening. These could produce 30 mm of rain in less than an hour, large hail and also squally winds.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Mon, 22nd Jul 2013 until 22:00 on Mon, 22nd Jul 2013

Isolated thunderstorms with very heavy rain, hail and gusty winds are possible later this afternoon and early evening.

The public should be aware of the risk of very localised surface water flooding, particularly if the thunderstorms affect urban areas.
